Bob Siegerink is an epidemiologist with lab training and a broad interest, who works as Principal Investigator at the Center for Stroke Research, Charité Berlin. Together with his group he works on several projects aimed to unravel the causes, the concept of stroke as a thrombo-inflammatory disease, the short and long term consequences of stroke as well as the effect of new treatment modalities.. interest Additionally, he provides methodological support to researchers from other research groups of the CSB, both clinical and preclinical. Besides his work in vascular neurology, Bob has a strong interest in methodology, quality of research, causal inference and scientific integrity, which resulted in several scientific projects, courses and collaborations.