

Coen Maas is associate professor at the department of Clinical Chemistry and Haematology, in the University Medical Center Utrecht, the Netherlands. His research focuses on physiology of the plasma contact system and plasminogen activation, bridging the fields of cardiovascular research and clinical immunology. He has 88 publications (3197 citations, H-index = 29, 34 last authorships, 10 first authorships). He chairs the Scientific and Standardization Subcommittee "Factor XI and the Contact System" of the International Society on Thrombosis and Haemostasis and founder of the biotech spinout company SERPINx BV (IP sold) and founder/CSO of TargED Biopharmaceuticals with patents on anti-inflammatory protease inhibitors and a novel thrombolytic agent for microvascular thrombosis.